RUB ALL RHEUMATISM PAIN AWAY WITH OLD TIME PENETRATING ST. JACOBS OIL

Get a small trial bottle and rub it in your sore, aching joints.

Count fifty! Pain gone. Rheumatism is "pain only." Not one case in fifty requires internal medicine. Rubbing "St. Jacobs Oil" penetrates the "tender spot," and relief comes instantly. "St. Jacobs Oil" is a harmless rheumatism cure which never disappoints and can not burn, or blister the skin.

Medicinal Weeds.

"Analysis of our edible weeds shows that they possess powerful medicinal qualities. The dandelion, for example, is replete with tonic salts and is aperient, besides being a natural liver medicine; the milkweed is a perfect tonic for the kidneys and a general cleanser of the system; the common yarrow is a good spring tonic for children; while red clover is one of the richest of all nitrogenous plants, and nitrogen is one of the most strengthening elements."

—Farm and Fireside.

Dr. and Mrs. Frank Van Kirk have returned from a two weeks' vacation spent in Chicago.

FRIDAY. IT'S AN ILL WIND, ETC.

SPORT Snap-Shots

MORRIS MILLER

Larry McLean, the Giants' lanky backstop, is petulant. And from a glim at the facts it would appear that Larry has some reason to be. He caught the only game the Giants won in the series and he was given only $500 as his share of the world's series receipts. While McLean wasn't with the Giants the whole season, he was life-saver behind the bat for the Giants with Meyers out of it, and he thinks $1,000 was the least they should have done for him. "Pretty rough stuff, I call it," said Larry a few days ago. "The mascot with the Athletics got as much as I did. They split half of a full share between Fromme and me and that gives me a fourth of what the rest got. I'm going to take this matter up with some one or other. And it would seem as if McLean should come in for a little more."

If there is a modicum of truth in this report, Connie Mack may thank Frank Chance for a big part of his world series success, indirectly, of course. At any rate, a Buffalo sport scribe offers the information that last spring Connie Mack was willing to trade Catcher Wally Schang for Paddy Green, a promising young pitcher then in Chance's possession. Frank refused to make the deal, says this Buffalo person, and if such is thus he is probably, booting himself about quite a bit. Green since has proven himself a false alarm and has been tossed aside, while of course we all know about Wally. The yarn has a number of the earmarks of improbability—though it does make lovely reading—and it's hard to believe that either Connie Mack or Frank Chance would so misjudge baseball talent. Also thirteen big league clubs put in drafts for Schang last fall, and at that time Green had never been known. A little more plausibility from Buffalo, please.

This is the day of the clever and harmless boxer. The public fancy is turning toward the fast and clever though punchless boys and such men as Richie Kilbane, McFarland, Dundee and Welsh are coping off the big prices. "If the public wants a jumping-jack for a champion, all right let 'em have 'em," said Able Attell, after he had lost his crown to Kilbane. "But take it from me he'll be a frizzle. He won't last long. That fancy needle work 'll go all right in the hick burgs, but Los Angeles, San Francisco and New York won't put up with it. What the big towns want is the slugging and these parlor cut-ups won't get by with the regular fans. Watch 'em now, I know." And for a while there it looked as though Attell had done it right. But the public is a fickle personality. Just now the knock-out boys are being pushed to one side and the Kilbane school is having its innings. The idols of the first fans today are the fast scientific boxers and none of them have a punch that would cause a swelling. One of the explanations for this seems to be that it is when the heavyweights are going right that the public craves the wallowing style. When there are fighters like old Bob Fitz, Sharkey and Jeffries to be seen the fans demand a punch in every mill, no matter what the weight. In the present day, however, with so many cheeses among the heavier fighters the yearning for the rough stuff abates somewhat and the lads with the fancy steps come into their own. Interest in the slugging has dwindled at present and science of the thing.

BELOIT CRITICISES LOCALS' CONFIDENCE

Think There Is No Doubt but What They Will Defeat Janesville—Confidence Will Tell.

If Beloit are over-confident Saturday, something is surely going to happen much to their sorrow, for over-confidence is what tells in a hard game. They have been playing hard and steady ball all season, with three or four one-sided scores to their credit.

On the other hand, Janesville have been organizing a new team, and it took two defeats and one brilliant victory to decide just what Curtis wanted in the line, and in the backfield. Now the team are ready for Beloit. Janesville plowed through the fifteen second men yesterday for long gains, with the weight against them. Just enough confidence prevails to fight hard, and if beaten the locals will offer no excuses. They intend to win, and the school spirit is bending near the victory point today.

The probable lineup for tomorrow will be as follows: Smiley, I. G.; Hemming, I. G.; Badger, I. G.; Mout, C.; Jones, R. G.; McVicar, R. T.; Stewart, R. E.; Hayes, G. B.; Atwood, I. H.; Dearborn, R. H.; Dalton, F. B.; Mooney, Schenk and Roherty subs.

COMPULSION WON'T WORK.

When the extra session of congress was called, for the purpose of passing a new tariff bill, the employers of labor were given to understand that any reduction in wages would be regarded with suspicion, and the administration would promptly investigate. The democratic mind seemed disturbed by the thought that the industries of the country were a part of a great political machine, and that wage scales were adjusted in the interests of political capital.

It requires a large mind to evolve and entertain that kind of a thought, but democracy, after a long period of idleness, was equal to the occasion, and while employers generally regarded it as a joke, the party in power proceeded with all seriousness, and so it happens that Secretary Redfield of the department of commerce, is just now making a tour of Michigan in search of offenders. A dispatch says:

"Notice was served on employers of labor tonight by Secretary Redfield of the department of commerce that he had not abandoned his intention of investigating general reductions of wages made on the plea that the new tariff compelled retrenchment. The secretary voiced his views in an address before the Flint board of commerce."

"The secretary declared that the threats of reduction in wages as a result of the Underwood tariff law had become few of late. This he attributed directly to the declaration of the administration that it would act promptly where such threats were carried out."

"The fact that powers exist," he said, "in hands that will use them if and only if general and sufficient cause shall appear for such use, and will then use them conservatively and considerately if at all, seems to have had a sobering effect upon those who would make the wages of the laborer a fulcrum on which to poise their political arguments."

There are a few things still in existence which are beyond the power of reformers to regulate, because there are some natural laws which demand recognition, and the demand is so imperative that it can not be ignored. The question of how many people shall be employed in any industry, at any given time, or what wages they shall be paid, is too large a question for either the president or his cabinet to decide. The law of supply and demand, both in the realm of product and labor is the only law that governs, or ever will.

If all the fine-spun theories of this progressive age become effective the atmosphere would be oppressive, and the simple discussion of some of them is enervating. There has as yet been no serious disturbance in the industrial world, since the passage of the new tariff bill, but democratic guardianship is entitled to no credit, on this account. The business of the country is well established, and it is making a desperate effort to survive the epidemic of regulation, and may succeed in spite of the continuous vaudeville performance at Washington.

President Wilson really takes the kernel from the nut when he discusses the question of civil service. The plan that civil service is based upon is all right, but when it comes down to actual practice it is most faulty. A man cannot judge the merits of a job of plumbing if he has never seen any plumbing in his life, nor can a man pass upon the merits of a cow if all he knew about the bovine family was that they gave milk.

Wisconsin's rate commission is working overtime just at present trying to solve all the troublesome questions that come before them for decision. Sometimes their decisions are delayed as long as those of a high court of justice and one is reminded that the ways of justice are dark and devious like the acts of the heathen Chinaman.

Wall street does not appear half as nervous about the proposed currency measure as one would expect. Perhaps they understand that it is not going to pass in its present form. If this be true why not let the public into their confidence so that business may settle down into its usual channels.

The Mexican situation continues to be the all important problem that the present administration faces. It can not be solved quickly and now that the United States faces it alone it is going to be a serious question for Mr. Wilson and his cabinet to solve.

STATE PRESS.

Take Chip Off Shoulder.
This congress should repeal at once the objectionable five per cent discriminatory tariff duty, and as well the free toll provision in the Panama canal law. We will then be in that condition of harmony with all countries so highly desirable if we are to receive the full rewards of our great enterprise, the Panama canal.—Racine Journal News.

Fighting Over Labels.
Canada is fully as much or more afflicted with party politics as this country is. Everything is judged on the basis of which party proposed it. Each party opposes everything first proposed by the other party, no matter whether it is good or bad, and the public has to suffer with the resulting ills. This country is growing out of that condition more rapidly than Canada is.—Superior Telegram.

Is Parallel Exact.
About sixty years ago James Buchanan took the same position with regard to the situation in the south that Mr. Wilson is now taking regarding the situation in Mexico. There was nothing to fight about. Let things drift. Play a waiting game and everything will come out right. History, however, does not seem to approve of Mr. Buchanan's course.—Wausau Record Herald.

On the Spur of the Moment
Love.
If somebody loves you,
You can't be sad,
You've cause for rejoicing,
You've cause to be glad,
You've a subject for some
As you journey your way,
If somebody loves you,
You ought to be gay.

If somebody loves you,
You're bound to be gay
And blow in the cash
In a wild reckless way.
If somebody loves you,
You'll part from your pelf
And make quite an all-around
Pool of yourself.

If somebody loves you,
You'll write foolish notes
In lovely-dove language
Upon which she dotes.
She'll save them and sue you
The jury will find for
The plaintiff, of course.

New York Notes.
A gentleman who had his elbow in my left eye for an hour on a subway train the other evening told me that he always hated to ride in the subway and I quite agree with him. There is a certain monotony in the scenery along the subway, especially on a dark day. It grows a look all alike after one has been on the train for an hour or two.

There are several different kinds of trains in the subway running on the same track and even if you don't care where you go you are more than apt to get on the wrong train.

The subway is a great place for a visitor to get the true New York atmosphere, for it is there in bunches. It is often so thick that the trains have some difficulty in jamming their way through. At every station fifteen persons get off and forty-seven get on. By the time the train gets to One Hundred and Forty-fifth street those who wish to get out have to be pried out with crowbars. There they may pry three out and crowd seven in.

A short, stout, No. 60 gentleman who rode the subway at Fulton street is quite liable to get out at One Hundred and Fortieth street a tall, thin, willowy person whose clothes are too short for him. They have a habit of changing a man's physical make-up and even some of the travel is heavy, but although he may be passed out until his trousers reach only to his knees and his coat tail only as far as the middle of his back, he is happy because he has saved seven or eight minutes.

Strong on History.
There are names and names, and the writer who has traveled some among the Indians has heard some peculiar ones. In one instance we stopped at a hut and asked for a glass of water. We knew better than to ask for anything else, for Indians can't buy it. A Chippewa brave favored us with the refreshment, and in the course of the conversation was asked what his name might be.

"Habe," grunted the Indian. "Habe" is a peculiar name," we said. "I don't believe I have ever heard it before."

Habe's nickname," grunted the brave. "He named after his big name. Habeas Corpus Tobash. Big chief. My father had names in big history book."

"My brother he name is Cartiorari Tobash. Other brother, he name is S. W. Tobash, first name Search Warrant."

Upon investigation it developed that the old chief had decided to give his boys names common in civilization, and had bought a big book from a traveling agent, the agent conferred them with much Indian ceremony upon his sons. The book turned out to be an old-fashioned volume of the compiled laws of Michigan, but the old chief never found it out and died satisfied. Even Habe didn't know the truth.

AUTO IN COLLISION WITH LUMBER WAGON

Valentine J. Weber and Party of Boosters Meet With Accident on Washington Street.

Returning to Janesville shortly before 6 o'clock last evening after making the Booster trip to Monroe, Albany and Evansville, the car driven by Valentine J. Weber collided with a farmer's wagon near the fountain at the intersection of North Washington street and High street. Weber was following another of the Booster machines when suddenly it turned out and failing to see the farmer's rig, Weber's car crashed into the wagon, sending the rear end through the roof of the automobile. The automobile was swerved into the curb and a telephone pole, was badly damaged, steering gear, radiator and front axle being put out of commission, but the occupants of the car escaped without serious hurts. The other persons in the Weber auto were R. M. Bostwick, E. T. Fish, James McGiffin and E. H. Connell. The farmer was unhurt and his wagon was not damaged.

In recounting the rough roads in Green county, between Monroe and Albany, the machine driven by H. H. Bliss suffered a broken spring, which necessitated slow travel on the return journey. Mr. Bliss and his party arrived in Janesville shortly after 10 o'clock, coming from Albany to Janesville, omitting Evansville.

BRIEF LOCAL NEWS.

Got Ten Days: Michael Connors was sentenced to ten days in the county jail this morning by Judge Maxfield on his pleading guilty to a charge of intoxication. Connors has not been before the court for a long time and was therefore given a light sentence. He was not given the alternative of a fine as the judge deemed his greatest need was to get into fit physical condition.

Only One Card Up: Only one placard for contagious disease is up in the city at the present time, according to City Health Officer Dr. S. B. Buckmaster. This one being for a mild case of diphtheria. There have been no cases of contagious disease among the school-children since the schools were reopened in September.

Labor in Demand: The demand for labor in this vicinity is indicated by the fact that the Rock County Sugar Company has applied at the sheriff's office for the services of ten men. The sheriff was not able to supply them more than two men at the present time. A farm hand applied for a position at the jail this morning and was at once provided with a place by a visitor who happened to be in the sheriff's office at the time.

Mass Meeting: At the close of school this afternoon, the student body of the high school assembled together in the main room, and for fully an hour yells were heard and short talks by different members of the faculty and students were given regarding tomorrow's game with Beloit. The students are frantic over the contest, and a large delegation of rooters promised to make the trip with the team at noon Saturday.

Swift Justice: Charles Lusk was picked up in an intoxicated condition in front of the Grand Hotel by Patrolman Champion at about eleven o'clock this morning. Lusk, a minor league baseball player, was charged with intoxication before Judge Maxfield, plead guilty to the charge filed against him, and was sentenced to ninety days at hard labor.

Hold Examinations: Examinations for teachers to have back work to make up or wish to raise the grade of their certificates will be held tomorrow at the office of County Superintendent O. D. Aufsdal. Examinations were to have been held today but no teachers put in an appearance.

NOW DRIVING ANCHOR PILES OF LAST PIER

Partial Collapse of Derrick Support Causes Delay—Using Dredge on Abutment Work.

Work was started this morning at driving the anchor piles for the center pier on the new Milwaukee street bridge, the last to be constructed. This work was delayed several hours by the partial collapse of the false work supporting the derrick and it is considered fortunate that the machinery was not precipitated into the river. Necessary repairs have been made and the supports strengthened. More than one hundred piles will have to be driven.

The clamshell dredge was this morning transferred from the west derrick to that on the east bank and will be used to complete the excavation which was carried down to the water-line by laborers with pick and shovel.

The form for the second arch is about half completed and will probably be carried down close to the center pier some time tomorrow. Large quantities of screened and unscreened gravel have been piled at the west approach for casting the center pier and second arch.

The boy who carries water to the contractor's workmen is reported to have made an ineffectual search this morning for a new look, although he visited several machine shops.

"In The Bishop's Carriage."

In this remarkable motion picture adaptation of Miriam Michelson's great play, in which James K. Hackett achieved such a tremendous success, Daniel Frohman will present Mary Pickford, one of America's leading legitimate stage dramatic actresses of today.

Mary Pickford, portraying the leading role of this wonderful drama, supported by an all-star cast of talented pantomime stage artists, is without a doubt one of the biggest photographic attractions that have ever been afforded lovers of high-class photoplays.

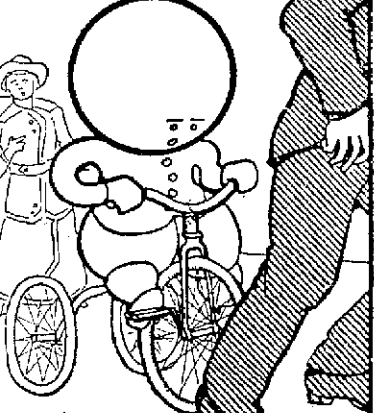

"In the Bishop's Carriage" is a fascinating drama of the underworld that approaches tragedy and ends in romance. It presents an intensely interesting combination of the thrilling incidents and dramatic episodes of the book in a masterful series of wonderful photographic scenes.

The story of the film drama is one sterling and realistic in the extreme and graphically depicts how Nance Olden (played by Mary Pickford) plays many strange parts, but eventually adopts a role that leads to love and happiness.

There is no need to trouble about water and soap when cleaning a window. The easier way is to crush up a newspaper, dip it lightly in paraffin, and use as a polisher. JANESVILLE GIRL TO WED IN CANADA

Miss Hazel A. Davis, formerly at Mercy Hospital, to be married this month at Hamilton.

Miss Hazel A. Davis, a well known Janesville girl, and formerly a nurse at the Mercy Hospital, who for some time has been residing in Chicago, will leave this morning for Hamilton, Canada, where she is to be married to Harry S. Cowan of that city.

Miss Davis has a large number of friends in Janesville and was especially very popular with the young folks, and she leaves for Canada with the best wishes of her numerous friends here.

Mr. Cowan is the son of a prosperous merchant in Hamilton, and for the past year has been employed as private secretary to an important official of the New York Central Lines in Chicago, and it was through his connection with this corporation that he became acquainted with Miss Davis, as she was employed as a telephone operator by the same people.

The wedding will take place next month and will be attended by a large number of friends from Chicago and Hamilton, after which the young couple will spend their honeymoon at various points of interest in the east and then return to Hamilton, where they intend to make their home, the groom having signed to play with a professional basketball club there for the coming season. The young couple will be at home after January 1st, 1914.

ELECTED AS TEMPORARY PRESIDENT OF FRESHMEN

Joseph Ryan of this city, and a freshman at Beloit college, was chosen yesterday at a meeting of the freshman class as temporary president. He will head the class until the members become better acquainted with each other. But for a bad ankle, which he sustained early in the fall, it is probable that he would be used on the second string of backs on the varsity eleven this fall. He is expected, however, to be back in the same within a couple of weeks.

The college varsity football, eleven from Beloit passed through the city this noon on their way to Appleton, where they will clash tomorrow with Lawrence for the state championship.

BALKS THE TOWEL THIEF

The Bathroom Linen on a Chain to Prevent Removal.

Hotel and boarding-house keepers whose inventories are necessarily more or less public, are the constant victims of linen thieves, and how to keep her patrons supplied with towels and at the same time not let herself open to the operations of thieves has been a quandary.

A Kansas inventor has recently secured a patent on a system which seems to overcome this difficulty. The towels are supplied with an eyelet, and as these pieces are piled on the shelf, a chain is run through the holes, the other end being secured to the wall at a point below the shelf. This permits of a towel being removed and used, and yet makes it impossible for any of them to be carried off either by design or accident.

ORDERED DEPORTED, NOT MUCH WORRIED

Marie Lloyd.

Marie Lloyd, English music hall actress and singer, did not appear outwardly perturbed when informed that she must be deported as an undesirable alien, when she reached New York last week. But she has appealed to the Commissioner of immigration at Washington for a modification of the order that will enable her to make a vaudeville tour of the country. She was ordered back to England because she shared a state-room on the journey over with Bernard Dillon, a jockey. The couple are not married.

PROPELLOR FOR SWIMMERS

Device Which Simplifies the Operation of Cutting the Water.

The swimming machine which has been invented by a Pacific Coast man greatly accelerates the speed with which it is possible for a human being to move through the water and also removes the element of danger from the sport of swimming. The machine shown in the accompanying cut is capable of being folded into compact space and when in an extended condition is of such shape and design as to support a man in the water at a comfortable angle, his head being above the surface and his feet below. It is supported by floats and is equipped with a rudder and propeller. The machine is entirely hidden beneath the water when in use, and with it the most marvelous maneuvers are possible, the operator moving to and fro through the water with great rapidity and with no apparent exertion.

To Remove Paper.

A good way to remove old wall paper is to use the following solution: A thick paste solution should be made by adding flour and a few ounces of acetic acid. This paste solution should be applied with a brush to the old wall paper in quantities. After a few minutes the old paper can be removed in great strips very easily and with very little dust or dirt.

A POOR JOB. "He claims to be a self-made man." "Humph! It's a pity that as long as he had it with his own hands he didn't make a good job of himself then."

and are said to be much lovelier than those with common men-whale bones. There are some crude persons who deride the idea of men wearing corsets, but the sincere devotee can pooh-pooh at the beasts.

The most select and exclusive men's millinery shops are showing some very charming creations, the most popular being those with the flowing bands made of pale shades of chiffon or other light material. Peacock feathers placed somewhat in the rear are also in high favor with the fashion leaders.

The gayest colors will predominate this fall in men's suitings. This is also true of shirtings, cravats, half-hosings, collar-buttonings and underwearings.

The sweet graduates of the young men's finishing schools are said to have influenced the present styles. Their scarfs match their hose and their we suppose, are finished with pale pink insertion.

How Planets Came Into Being.

From the striking relation of planetary motions, a British scientist has made the deductions that the planets grew out of scattered material each bringing the next into being by perturbation, with Jupiter as the starting point, and the only planet with an original nucleus. From the law of evolution worked out, it is concluded that the nearest planet beyond Neptune should be 47.5 as far from the sun as the earth, and comparable with Neptune in size.

NOTE BRISKER TRADE IN TOBACCO MARKET

Sales of 1913 Crop at Slightly Advanced Prices Are Reported This Week.

A moderate amount of buying of the new crop is being accomplished in nearly all sections at prices slightly advanced from previous quotations though trading is being done by the smaller dealers in most cases. The big concerns who usually take over the bulk of the crop are still conspicuous by their absence from the field, according to the Edgerton Reporter. Sample sales coming to notice are:

Antane Olson, 10a at 12¢4c.
H. H. Lund, 10c at 12¢4c.

Anthony Anderson, 6a at 12¢4c.

Information reaches us that in the Vernon county district about half the crop is under contract, but buying is subsiding. A cold wave that swept down upon us early in the week brought some severe frosts that have produced some fat stems in the late harvested tobacco where sheds were not well protected.

The 1912 packings have been selling liberally since the sampling has been completed and generally at better prices than Wisconsin leaf, has heretofore brought. Trades involving six to seven thousand cases have been effected the past few weeks, and half or more of the binder stock held by local packers is already sold.

The Reporter has the following to say on the effect of the Paul law on the tobacco market:

"Were it not for fear of being misled by the Paul law with its poisonous fangs which has kept the larger operators out of the market, there would be very little if any of the new crop of Wisconsin tobacco unsold at this date, so anxious are the big manufacturing concerns who buy from first hands to secure their supply of binder leaf. Rather than take chances, which a number of local packers have less fear of, they prefer to wait until the tobacco is cured and a better examination of its merits can be obtained before entering the buying field. By so doing, however, they permit the local packers to eat the first pick of the choice crops, which they most dislike of the whole situation."

WISCONSIN SLUMPS IN WHEAT RAISING

State Falls to Low Rank in Production of This Crop for a Variety of Reasons.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., Oct. 24.—From the rank of second among the wheat producing states Wisconsin has in fifty years steadily declined until today it stands in twenty-sixth place. This fact is pointed out in a new bulletin on "Wheat Growing in Wisconsin," written by E. J. Delwiche and B. D. Leith, and issued today by the Agricultural Experiment station of the University of Wisconsin. Chief among the causes of this decline are faulty systems of farming, the rapid expansion of the dairy industry, advances in the cost of land, a falling off in the prices paid for wheat and competition with improved types of barley.

Because of the rapidly increasing consumption of wheat more areas adapted to its production must be returned to wheat growing, says the bulletin. The outlook for successful wheat culture in Wisconsin, in rotation with other crops, is regarded as very promising.

The wheat regions of Wisconsin are portions of the Lake Superior country, extending through parts of Douglas, Bayfield, Ashland and Iron counties; clay sections near Lakes Winnebago and Michigan, particularly in the counties adjoining Lake Winnebago, the lower Fox river, and Green Bay, and parts of Polk, St. Croix, Barron and adjoining counties. The southern portion, including the counties south of the northern boundary of Dodge and Columbia, have soils well adapted to wheat growing, and the same is true of a wide belt of land in central Wisconsin. Experiments begun on these soils in 1911 indicate their suitability to winter wheat production.

The bulletin points out that wheat does not deplete soil fertility more appreciably than barley, oats or rye, and that, on the other hand, the net returns of 1,000 pounds of grain sold, after deducting the value of fertilizer constituents contained in the crop sold, are greater for wheat than for any of these other cereals.

Pedigreed Kharkot is recommended for northern Wisconsin. Pedigreed strains of the Turkey Red type have proven superior in southern Wisconsin. The Blue Stem has proven an excellent wheat for Wisconsin conditions.

High barometer also prevails in the plateau region, and generally fair weather is reported west of the Mississippi, except on the north Pacific coast, where it was raining this morning.

Had Him Worrying.

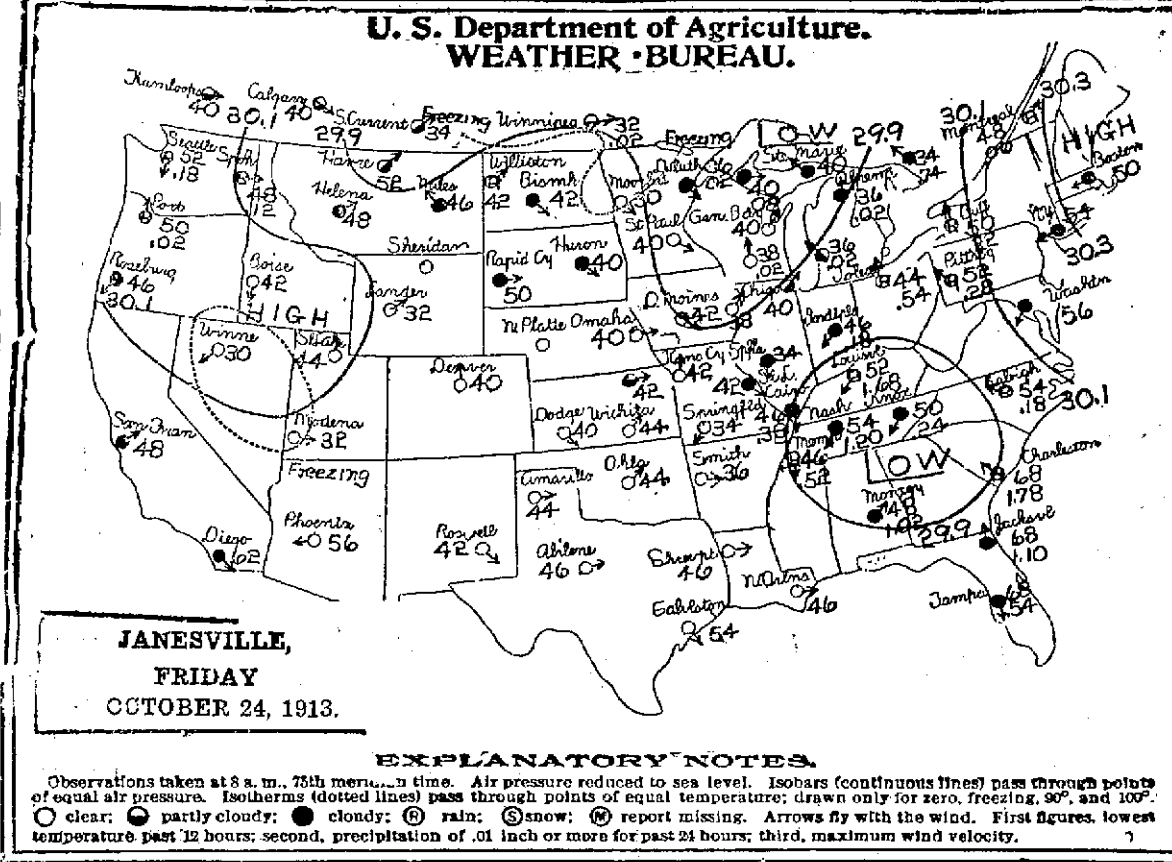

"Alphonse," the American girl asked her titled husband one evening, "why have you been so strange and cold of late?" "Didn't you tell me last week that your father was failing?" "Yes—physically failing," she replied. "Oh!" and his look brightened. He heaved a sigh of relief. "Oh," said he, "that's all right, then! I thought it was something serious."—Princeton Tiger.

Simple Pleasures.

To become again more joyous, more childlike, more naive than we are, to look into the world with clear eyes and to consign to the devil the problematical chimeras behind which only too often hides the unclean turmoil of the market place, chimeras which have made us unhappy, slavish and uncertain—that would do us all good.—Boston Transcript.

Floor Pa!

"Willie!" said his father, crossly, "I never used to ask so many questions when I was young." "I'm awful sorry, papa," Willie thoughtfully replied, "cause if you had maybe you'd be able to answer more of mine now."

The barometer is low in the lake region and southeastern states, and rain has fallen throughout the region between the Mississippi valley and the Appalachian mountains. Heavy rains of one inch or more were reported at Louisville, Nashville, Montgomery, Charleston and Jacksonville. High barometer prevails on the north Atlantic coast, and the weather here is generally fair.

Quick! Ladies! Learn All About Snow-Mellow and Save Those Eggs

OH, how we wish we could tell you in words all the wonders of Snow-Mellow! It's a snowy, fluffy, delicious "goody" that lends itself to all the arts of the housewife in making her dinners and luncheons delightful. There isn't any one kind of Snow-Mellow dessert—for when you have Snow-Mellow, you will find dessert making so easy and pleasant that you will make not only the various desserts described in the Snow-Mellow recipes, which come in each package, but you will make many new desserts that your fancy creates.

That is what Snow-Mellow brings you—new desserts. And all made in just a few minutes' time, without eggs and without cooking.

Save the expense of eggs, the exasperation of the eggs that refuse to beat properly, the fillings that squash and fall, the icings that get hard and brittle, the meringues that grow tough. This Snow-Mellow is going to revolutionize the work and expense of dessert making for you. For less than four pennies' worth of Snow-Mellow makes the filling for your cake—or the toppings for two of your pies.

A Score of Delightful Desserts

Never were such cakes as you are now going to make, ladies—every one of you! Never such delicious fillings and icing, and always sure to come out just right—better than any filling or topping you ever could make with eggs or cream—standing up thick, fluffy and snowy for days at a time—never such meringue for pies and puddings—as you are going to make now with Snow-Mellow—and without the use of a single egg! You may be a good cake-maker, but wait till you see your first cake filled with Snow-Mellow's delicious filling, or iced with Snow-Mellow's cold water or boiled icing! Wait till you see your first Snow-Mellow meringue pie! Snow-Mellow on pie—Oh, Goody!

Snow-Mellow is So Economical

Snow-Mellow is so simple, so easy to make. Full directions come in every package. Into a warmed mixing bowl, pour one-quarter cup very hot, but not scalding, water. Put in one scraped-off-level tablespoonful of Snow-Mellow. With plain, ordinary hand-beater, beat up the Snow-Mellow and water. It quickly beats up into a fluffy, snowy meringue. Beat it till it gets very stiff and dry—and it will stand up firmly between the layers of your cake. Flavor with about ten drops of vanilla or your favorite flavoring. Then add one-third cup granulated sugar, as explained in the directions. Now Snow-Mellow is done. Nothing ever was easier.

And this delicious, exquisite Snow-Mellow may be used for making a score of different desserts. Meringues for Pies, Puddings, Custards, Floating Island—Fillings for Layer Cakes, Cream Puffs, Eclairs—topping (instead of cream) for Fruits and Cereals—also to make candies, such as Divinity Fudge, Marshmallows and Kisses.

You can flavor and color Snow-Mellow with any flavor and any color—making many desserts that will be delightfully new to your family.

Use Snow-Mellow first as a topping for Pie or a filling for Layer Cake. One tablespoonful of Snow-Mellow—costing only 4c—goes as far as five eggs, which would cost you 12c to 20c. And Snow-Mellow is good—oh, so wonderfully tasty and satisfying. All of you—"from baby to grandmother"—will just "love" Snow-Mellow!

Read the recipe printed over the boy's hand on the other side of the cake-picture here. It tells you how to save the eggs and yet make such a wonderfully fine cake as you never before knew could be made.

And now read, right below here, how to get Snow-Mellow and why Snow-Mellow is so very economical.

AT ALL GROCERS' Janesville and Surrounding Towns

We want to explain to you how we have arranged to make Snow-Mellow the most economical of desserts for your table.

In business there is a certain "overhead" charge against each package—packing, wrapping, boxing, cartage, freight, delivery, etc. And here is how we solved the problem of making Snow-Mellow economical for you. The same "overhead" expense that pays for delivering a ten-cent package to you will pay for delivering five or six or seven times that quantity of Snow-Mellow if we put it all in one package. And that is what we have done.

Instead of putting only enough Snow-Mellow for one dessert in a package and charging ten cents—we put seven times that quantity—enough for seven desserts—in one package, and instead of charging you seventy cents, the price is only 25c—because we save for you the cost of packing and delivering the six extra packages. That is the only fair way. For after you once find how easy to make and how good to eat Snow-Mellow is—you will want to serve it in different desserts several times every week.

This big-quantity package of Snow-Mellow, guaranteed under the Pure Food Law, contains enough to make seven liberal family size desserts or fillings for seven two-layer cakes—and costs only 25 cents—less than four cents for each delicious family size dessert or for each whole cake filling.

So go today, madam, to your grocer and get for your family this exquisite, wonderful Snow-Mellow.

FRANK & HOUREN, Inc., National Distributors, Chicago

Make this Cake — Save the Eggs!

Snow-Mellow makes the most delicious icings, or a rich, thick, tender filling—for your layer cakes without eggs and without cooking. So, as you do not need any whites of eggs for your Snow-Mellow filling or icings—you don't want to break several eggs to get the yolks for making the cake layers. Save the eggs! Make cake layers by this recipe—using only one egg for the whole cake.

Put one egg, yolk and white, into a cup. Half fill cup with melted butter. Then fill to top with milk. Mix thoroughly. Put into mixing bowl, 1 cup sugar, 1½ cups flour, 1 heaping teaspoonful baking powder. Now mix wet and dry ingredients together and beat three minutes. Add a little vanilla for flavoring.

This makes two layers. After baking your cake layers, make your Snow-Mellow icing or filling—using no eggs—according to the plain, simple directions which come inside every package of Snow-Mellow.

Just think of it! A sumptuous cake, made with only one egg for the cake layers—and just one tablespoonful of Snow-Mellow, costing four cents, makes the icing or the filling, half an inch thick—rich, snowy, delicious—for this big, two-layer cake. Clip out this cake recipe right now. Then get your package of Snow-Mellow quick!

Here Is How

RENOWNED PHYSICIAN HAS FRIENDS HERE

Dr. H. Williams, Colored, Associated With the Late Dr. Palmer and Classmate of Dr. J. Mills.

Among the notable men mentioned in "The Commercial Chronicle," October issue, is an article on Dr. Daniel H. Williams, who enjoys high standing in his profession as the first to operate successfully upon the living human heart. Dr. Williams is well known in this city, having studied in the office of the late Dr. Henry Palmer. Dr. James Mills of this city was a classmate of the colored physician at Northwestern college and is well acquainted with him. The article published is as follows:

"In a recent editorial one of the country's greatest journalists deplored the fact that physicians and surgeons who have blazed the trail of modern progress were not given the full measure of praise by the people at large. Pasteur, and others, he said, had done more for humanity than Washington or Martin Luther, yet their names were unfamiliar to thousands who consider Grant and Lee as great heroes of history. Undoubtedly he was more or less right, but it is a fact that the general public is daily becoming more appreciative of the greatness of our surgical pioneers."

"Chicago people should not forget that in this city is located one of the world's leading surgeons, a man who paved the way for some of the most wonderful feats of modern surgery by proving that it was possible to operate successfully upon the living human heart. We refer to Dr. Daniel H. Williams, colored, founder of the Provident hospital at Dearborn and Thirty-sixth streets. Dr. Williams was the first surgeon to operate upon the living human heart with complete success, sewing up the wound in the heart of a man who had been stabbed and left for dead. The man is living today, the operation having been performed in 1893."

Dr. Williams founded the Provident hospital in 1893. This institution never would have been possible but for the doctor's own personal efforts. He solicited the funds necessary for its establishment and for many years was its chief surgeon after its great work had been begun."

"Dr. Williams was born in Pennsylvania, of free parents, in 1858, coming to Wisconsin as a child. He was educated in the Wisconsin schools and later at Northwestern university. He began the practice of medicine in Chicago in 1883. He is a member of the American Medical association, Illinois State Medical society, Chicago Medical society, and was on the surgical staff of the Protestant Orphan asylum from 1883 to 1893. He was a member of the Illinois State Board of Health from 1884 to 1889. From 1889 to 1891 he was a member of the Cook county hospital surgical staff. He is now on the staff of St. Luke's hospital. For five years, during the second administration of President Cleveland, Dr. Williams was surgeon in chief of the Freedmen's hospital, Washington, D. C., the largest negro hospital in the world. For a number of years he has toured the country each year, giving clinics at southern negro medical schools."

"Dr. Williams is one of the most successful surgeons in America today and is a fine example of the self-sacrificing physician who modestly accomplishes great things for humanity. He represents American citizenship at its best."

When you're buying, buy the best; cheap things are the dearest far. Whether it be a coat, a pair of shoes, a car, or a car. Better do without the hat you are needing, till you know you can buy the smoothest that any man in town can show. Better do without the sword that you need to shave your chin, till you feel you can afford one that isn't made of tin. Better go the same old course, living with your wife along, than to buy a cheap divorce which is sure to turn out wrong. Cheap things always break your heart and depreciate your fame; therefore, in the clanging mart, seek the best, and buy the same as the whole gang catalogue seek the best and order that, whether it's a bottle of dog you are wanting, or a cat; whether it's a pair of shoes, or a pound of boneless prunes, or a paper with the news, or a pair of pantaloons; if it's a book of verse, or a padlock for your chest, or a shotgun or a bearse, it will pay to buy the best. Weariness and discontent of cheap buying are the fruit; better go as Adam went than to buy a shoddy suit.

TRUSTEES APPOINTED TO CARRY OUT TRUST

Mother Church Directors and J. E. Fernald Trustees Under Mrs. Eddy's Will.

Janesville members of the Christian Science faith were interested in the action of the probate court of the state of New Hampshire, that on Saturday Judge Charles H. Corning appointed trustees to administer the trust created by the will of the discoverer and founder of Christian Science, Rev. Mary Baker Eddy. This appointment was in accordance with the decision of the supreme court of New Hampshire on October seventh.

These appointed are members of the board of directors of the First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston. The Mother Church, Archibald McLellan, Allison V. Stewart, John V. Dittmore, Adam Dickey, and James A. Neal and the administrator de bonis non of the estate, Josiah E. Fernald.

On Oct. 7 the decision came on an application made to the supreme court of the state by Mr. Fernald for instructions regarding the action he was to take as administrator de bonis non of estate of Mrs. Eddy, and the court ordered Mr. Fernald to hold the estate until the appointment of a trustee or trustees by the probate court. The appointment of trustees ends the litigation regarding the will of Mrs. Eddy and the disposition of the property left by her to The First Church of Christ, Scientist, The Mother Church at Boston, in trust for the promotion and extension of the religion of Christian Science as taught by her.

It is expected that Mr. Fernald will immediately file his account and after the formalities, which will take a month or two, the trustees will take possession under the trust provision of the will. The trustees have qualified and given a bond for $1,000,000 for the faithful performance of their trust.

THE ERRAND-DOER.
THIS is by way of being a little plea for someone who seems to me an under-appreciated personage. For want of a better title, I'll call her the "errand-doer."

The errand-doer, as you may suspect, is that soft-hearted person, who is always so weak-mindedly amiable about doing errands for other people, that she is always doing them.

"You say you're going to town tomorrow. Do you think you will be anywhere near J's? Because if you are, I wonder if it would be too much bother for you to get a yard of Point Venise for me to finish that dress I want to wear the day after tomorrow? It won't? You are such a dear. I don't believe it will take you very long. Go right to J's lace counter. I saw just about what I want there the other day."

"My dear, would you mind getting me a pair of gloves the next time you go to town? I'll tell you the size and the kind and you can go right to it's so it won't be very much bother. I hate to ask you, but you know I'm so tied down with the baby, that I simply can't get in town, and I'm really suffering for a pair of gloves."

Such are the pleas that continually come to the errand-doer and she almost always accedes to them with a "there's nothing-I-like-better" manner that naturally does not decrease them.

I fancy the stay-at-home person who proffers such requests as there, instead of receiving them, is bridling indignantly and thinking, "Well, I don't see anything so terrible about doing an errand now and then for a friend. I'm sure I'd be glad enough to do things for other people if I could get out, instead of being tied down at home"—or in the office, as the case may be.

Quite so, my friend. I'm sure you would—but I am not asking you to dispense with the errand-doer's services. All that I ask is that you shall not under-rate what she does, and not fail to fully show your gratitude and not overload her.

Remember that the difficulty of an errand done for oneself is multiplied by three when you do it for someone else. In this way, first, if you are doing an errand for someone else, you have her taste as well as yours to consult—which takes twice as long, and is an anxious task to both. Second, if you are doing an errand for someone else, you do not have the privilege of elasticity of price you would have in buying for yourself.

For instance, the lady who wanted the yard of lace said, "I don't believe it will take you very long. Go right to J's lace counter—I saw about what I wanted there the other day." But she asked for a yard two inches wide at one dollar and one-half. They were out of that width at that price at J's. If the errand-doer had been shopping for herself, she would have paid the next price, one dollar and eighty-seven, at once. But she knew her friend had to count pennies, and so she didn't like to go above the stipulated price. Consequently, she visited four shops before she found just the right price and quality.

Once in a while, an errand runs out just as described, but more often it doesn't. Of course, there are two sides to every situation. I believe that the woman shut in by office or home work has a moral right to the services of her less confined friend. But I do think she ought to appreciate how much she is getting. Don't you?

HEART and HOME PROBLEMS

MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am nineteen and in love with a very nice young man of about twenty-three. He has been coming to see me about one year and a half, but not regularly. He seems to care for me a great deal when in my presence and is jealous of certain boys. But he goes with other girls.

He likes to talk of one of my cousins who visited me some time back and seems to like her. He very frequently breaks dates, but always makes some excuse. On some occasions he has told me he was going to work and then went to see another girl, for whom I know he cares nothing. Do you think he cares anything for me, or is he doing this to make me jealous about him? I am very jealous-hearted.

WONDERER.
 Why show him that you are jealous, my dear? It only makes him want to tease you. Go with some of the other fellows yourself and have just as good a time as he has. I'm afraid he is not desperately fond of you, however. I don't like a man who has the habit of breaking engagements with girls. He isn't to be depended upon, especially when you find he hasn't told the lengthen the skirt with either of these trimmings.

(2) Do not wear all black, my dear. It is too somber for a young girl. If you think you must have a black dress, combine it with some bright color. Instead of silk, why not get a pretty soft woolen of some delicate shade? It will look better on you. The black hat will be suitable, as all-black hats are very fashionable now.

(3) No. (4) Yes.
 (5) If the slit is not too high and the petticoat is a modest color, it will not look badly.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Why is it that a girl's reputation is spoiled if she allows a boy to hug her, especially if she has been going with him for quite a long time?

Q. T. H.
 If she does not respect herself enough to make a boy respect her, she cannot hope to hold the respect of other people. A boy, even if he is an old friend, has a right to kiss and hug a girl unless he has her promise to marry him. Even then a modest girl will not allow too much hugging and kissing for an engagement is not a marriage.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Do cousins marry very often? Do you approve of it?

First cousins may not marry according to the laws of most of the states. There must be good reason for such laws, therefore one should not approve of the marriage of first cousins.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) I am a girl of sixteen, weigh 117 pounds and am 5 feet 1 in. in height. Please tell me if I am too stout and if so how should I reduce my weight?

(2) After a girl receives a letter from her boy friend, how long should she wait before she answers?

WORRIED.
 (1) You are a little heavy for your height, my dear. The best advice I can give you is to eat less and exercise more.

(2) If he is a very good friend you might answer it in a day or two. Do not wait longer than a week.

THE SEASONABLE WORD.

In the autumn, when there is such an abundance of fruit, the frugal housewife will provide for the winter, when there is less to choose from.

When there is such a supply of good things, great care should be taken not to over-eat. Over-taxing the system, with little exercise, is followed by all sorts of ills. Colds, bilious attacks, rheumatism and any number of troubles are often caused by over-eating.

Active young people are usually able to work off and assimilate their food, as they exercise much in the open air, but the middle-aged man or woman, who puffs on going upstairs, must use care in the amount of food consumed.

When baking pies, to avoid a soaked crust, do not put the filling into the pie until the top crust is ready. If there is depth enough to the crust, and it is put into a hot oven with a strong heat at the bottom, the pie will not run over.

How many who have never passed through the experience can appreciate what a little thing will make a sick person extremely uncomfortable and even cause positive distress. An improperly prepared piece of toast, bread not well toasted will cause indigestion and even heart failure. Why toast is ordered, and what a good slice of toast really is, does not always enter into the mind of the caretaker.

For Dyspeptics.—If there is too much acid in the gastric juice, eat fruits, green vegetable salads with oil, nuts and well cooked cereal with cream.

If there is a deficiency of acid, use lean chopped beef, white meat of chicken and white fish. Exclude all fats.

Drink two quarts of cool water each day. A glass before breakfast and one before retiring.

Use fresh, sweet butter and cream; nuts and olive oil for fats; avoid cooked fats and too great a mixture at any meal.

Do not eat too much nor too often. Do not combine sugar with acid fruits, ice cream or candy with fish. Avoid cheese and irritants, as pepper, mustard or highly seasoned sauces.

"Robber Dollar Sale."

A "robber dollar sale" was the title of a store's recent announcement intended to emphasize the idea that during the month a dollar could be stretched to cover more than its real value, according to the Clothier and Furnisher. To give forcible illustration, ten one-dollar bills were attached to the placard and were so folded that the figure one showed only on the bill at each end, so that at first glance the group looked like a much stretched single dollar.

Cheerful Temper.

A cheerful temper, joined with innocence, will make beauty attractive, knowledge delightful and wit good natured. It will lighten sickness, poverty and affliction; convert ignorance into an amiable simplicity and render deformity itself agreeable.—Addison.

If you want to buy or sell anything keep up with the procession.

MENUS FOR SCHOOL CHILDREN CARE ESSENTIAL IN THEIR FOOD

It has been well said that the greatest difference between the food of the rich and the food of the poor is not in the quality, but in the quantity. There is much truth in this, for to a very large extent we live on the same foods.

There are two points, however, that are so valuable in cooking that everyone should understand them and particularly when preparing food for growing children.

First—The cooking of starchy foods. Raw starch is in little hard grains that are digested very slowly. When placed in hot water these grains swell up into a soft mass and can then be easily digested. Out-meal, or cornmeal, that has been cooked for only a short time is very difficult to digest, but if the food is placed in a double boiler and cooked several hours they are very digestible.

Whole Wheat Bread.
 Thoroughly baked wheat bread is without a doubt one of the very best building foods for children and every normal healthy child can digest it. But half-baked bread, with the starch grains in it almost as hard as little bits of wood, is ruinous to the digestion of either young or old. This is also true in cooking the starchy vegetables.

Second—The use of fats in cooking foods for children. Fat is a valuable food and strengthening food, but, like every other food, it may injure body if taken in the wrong way, or in too large amount. Children need only about one-half an ounce of fat each day.

When fat has been made very hot as often happens when foods are fried, acids that injure the stomach are formed in it. Also when foods are cooked with fat the digestive juices can not act on them readily and they are digested very slowly or not at all. For this reason fried foods have no place in the diet of children; neither do they need as much fat as older people. Fried potatoes, cakes, crackers and fritters have no place in our children's menus.

GROWING RAPIDLY.
 We all know that children pass through different periods of growth and desire. Foods are changed accordingly. It would be quite difficult in a short article to specify meals for school children of all ages, so we will only consider those today from five to nine years. At this age the are growing fast and need food to supply them with energy, for they are in constant motion to supply heat to the body and to build up the tissues which make for new growth. If the school children are thin and tired most of the time they probably do not have enough food of the building kind, and if they are fat and stupid they may not have enough food of this kind and have too much sweet and starchy food. Plenty of fruit, eggs, bread and butter and milk are valuable sources of nourishment for growing children.

The meals for children should be neither heavy nor light. The stomach should never be overloaded so that digestion is difficult. Then children may go to school immediately after a meal and the brain will be able to work. Train children to eat slowly, chewing every mouthful. Give them rise a little earlier if necessary in the morning so as not to have them hurried. As these children go to bed early, the evening meal should be the slightest of the day. The following menus will show even balanced food for children of the ages given:

Breakfast.
 Shredded Baranans
 Shredded Wheat, Pisco, half and whole
 Creamed Codfish
 Whole Wheat Bread and Butter

Dinner.
 Roast Lamb, Currant-Mint Jelly
 Creamed Potatoes
 Tomato Sauce with French Dressing
 Whole Wheat Bread
 Cup Custard
 Currant-Mint Jelly.

Take half a glass of fresh currant jelly, to which add one-half cup of shredded orange peel; mix all well together with a fork, turn into a glass dish and serve with the lamb.

Supper.
 Soft Boiled Eggs, Baked Potatoes
 Raspberries and Rough and Ready Cakes

Rough and Ready Cakes.
 Materials—Eggs, one; pastry flour, one and one-half cups; sugar, one cup; nuts, one-half cup; butter, two tablespoonsful; baking powder, one and one-half teaspoonfuls; vanilla, one teaspoonful; milk.

Directions—Break the eggs into the measuring cup, add the butter which should be soft, but not melted, fill the cup with milk. Sift the flour, sugar and baking powder together three times and last into the mixing bowl. Stir the milk mixture into the flour mixture. Beat well five minutes and mix well the nuts chopped or cut fine. Pour into a dozen greased greased pans. Bake in a quick oven until done—about fifteen or twenty minutes.

What are the duties of a parent? And what a lot better off in a so-called good book, playing some game, than to be on the outside with Heaven alone knows who?

Home is where the heart is. Surely a little boy's heart is in the home of his parents—his home. In justice to the little chaps their home should be made as attractive as possible, and permission given to bring their little friends in for a game, or an hour's study by reading together.

What books has your boy read, and does he ever read aloud to you in the evenings? Do you talk things over with him—in short are you and your boy chums?

When we read about the value of a boy—just one little boy—we surely ought to wake up to the responsibilities of the raising of our own little boys.

Our country is yearly spending vast amounts on boys that are not started right, on boys that were given too much time to themselves and in their youthful ignorance did not know how to wisely use it.

Teach your little son to be a success—a winner. You can do this by simply taking an active interest in all his affairs. You'll get as much—all most—help as you give, for you've no idea the way a growing boy responds to kindly, sympathetic interest.

Look your son in the face. How does he look? Are you satisfied with him, with the progress he is making, and if not just where does the blame belong?

But half-baked bread, with the starch grains in it almost as hard as little bits of wood, is ruinous to the digestion of either young or old. This is also true in cooking the starchy vegetables.

Second—The use of fats in cooking foods for children. Fat is a valuable food and strengthening food, but, like every other food, it may injure body if taken in the wrong way, or in too large amount. Children need only about one-half an ounce of fat each day.

When fat has been made very hot as often happens when foods are fried, acids that injure the stomach are formed in it. Also when foods are cooked with fat the digestive juices can not act on them readily and they are digested very slowly or not at all. For this reason fried foods have no place in the diet of children; neither do they need as much fat as older people. Fried potatoes, cakes, crackers and fritters have no place in our children's menus.

GROWING RAPIDLY.
 We all know that children pass through different periods of growth and desire. Foods are changed accordingly. It would be quite difficult in a short article to specify meals for school children of all ages, so we will only consider those today from five to nine years. At this age the are growing fast and need food to supply them with energy, for they are in constant motion to supply heat to the body and to build up the tissues which make for new growth. If the school children are thin and tired most of the time they probably do not have enough food of the building kind, and if they are fat and stupid they may not have enough food of this kind and have too much sweet and starchy food. Plenty of fruit, eggs, bread and butter and milk are valuable sources of nourishment for growing children.

The meals for children should be neither heavy nor light. The stomach should never be overloaded so that digestion is difficult. Then children may go to school immediately after a meal and the brain will be able to work. Train children to eat slowly, chewing every mouthful. Give them rise a little earlier if necessary in the morning so as not to have them hurried. As these children go to bed early, the evening meal should be the slightest of the day. The following menus will show even balanced food for children of the ages given:

Breakfast.
 Shredded Baranans
 Shredded Wheat, Pisco, half and whole
 Creamed Codfish
 Whole Wheat Bread and Butter

Dinner.
 Roast Lamb, Currant-Mint Jelly
 Creamed Potatoes
 Tomato Sauce with French Dressing
 Whole Wheat Bread
 Cup Custard
 Currant-Mint Jelly.

Take half a glass of fresh currant jelly, to which add one-half cup of shredded orange peel; mix all well together with a fork, turn into a glass dish and serve with the lamb.

Supper.
 Soft Boiled Eggs, Baked Potatoes
 Raspberries and Rough and Ready Cakes

Rough and Ready Cakes.
 Materials—Eggs, one; pastry flour, one and one-half cups; sugar, one cup; nuts, one-half cup; butter, two tablespoonsful; baking powder, one and one-half teaspoonfuls; vanilla, one teaspoonful; milk.

Directions—Break the eggs into the measuring cup, add the butter which should be soft, but not melted, fill the cup with milk. Sift the flour, sugar and baking powder together three times and last into the mixing bowl. Stir the milk mixture into the flour mixture. Beat well five minutes and mix well the nuts chopped or cut fine. Pour into a dozen greased greased pans. Bake in a quick oven until done—about fifteen or twenty minutes.

What are the duties of a parent? And what a lot better off in a so-called good book, playing some game, than to be on the outside with Heaven alone knows who?

Home is where the heart is. Surely a little boy's heart is in the home of his parents—his home. In justice to the little chaps their home should be made as attractive as possible, and permission given to bring their little friends in for a game, or an hour's study by reading together.

In a Fir Tree. In Scappoose, Ore., there is a windmill in a fir tree. The fir tree, which serves as a tower, was sawed off at a height of about 60 feet from the ground, and a well was sunk at the foot of the tree. A tank house was then attached to the side of the trunk some 40 feet above the ground, a wind wheel was placed above, and the ingenious owner has a model mill for all practical purposes.

WHY 7000 DRUGGISTS

Guarantee and Recommend Vinol.

If any one should know the value of a medicine it is the retail druggist who sells it. Therefore, when over seven thousand of the best retail druggists in the country recommend Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic, without oil, as the greatest tonic reconstructive and strength-giving they have ever sold, it must indicate the value of Vinol.

We could publish columns of such testimony as the following: "A. C. Brady, druggist of Fall River, Mass., says: 'In cases where cod liver oil, emulsions and other tonics fail, Vinol will heal, strengthen and cure.'"

A. Potterfield, druggist, of Charleston, W. Va., says: "It is a pleasure to sell Vinol as it gives such universal satisfaction."

Hunter & McGee, druggists, of Jackson, Miss., say: "We have great confidence in the strength, creating and curative value of Vinol."

We ask every run-down, nervous, debilitated, aged or weak person or any person suffering from chronic cough, colds, bronchitis, or any ailment, to try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that their money will be returned if it does not do all we claim. May Help You if Lungs Are Affected

Proper diet, fresh air and temperate habits are beneficial to persons suffering from Lung Trouble, but in a great many instances reports show that the addition of a medicine for this affection has materially helped in bringing about recovery. For more than fifteen years Eckman's Alternative, a medicine for Lung Trouble, has accomplished good results. Read what it did in this case: "Gentlemen: In December, 1908, March, 1909, and September, 1909, I was taken with hemorrhages of the lungs which confined me several weeks, each time to bed. My doctor advised me to go to West. I went to Denver, Colo., and after my arrival I met Mr. Eckman. He, upon learning of my condition, urged me to take Eckman's Alternative. I kept on taking the medicine and improved fast. In March, 1910, I received a good appetite and sleep well. When I left Denver my weight was 130 pounds. I now weigh 160, my normal weight. I thank God and your Alternative for my health." (Above abbreviated.) PAUL L. FASCHNET. (Above abbreviated.) Eckman's Alternative has been proven by many years' test to be most efficacious for severe cases of the Lung Affection, Bronchitis, Brouchitis Asthma, Stubborn Coughs and in upbuilding the system. Contains no narcotics, poisons, or harmful, formulating drugs. Ask for booklet telling of recoveries, and write to Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for evidence. "Well, how do you like detective work?"

"I fear I am not a detective, Mr. Secretary. I think I have demonstrated that."

"Ahem, I don't know, Mr. Holton. I tell you, it was more or less of a whim of mine, sending you to the ball. I had hoped you might meet a Miss La Tossa. In fact, I had requested a Secret Service man to bring you two together."

Holton started.

"Oh," he said, "I did meet her."

"You have done exactly as I might have wished you to do, and, having done this, it is my desire that you cultivate her acquaintance assiduously and report to me whenever you learn anything that may appear valuable."

He noticed the blank face of the officer. "What is the matter?" he asked.

"But, Mr. Secretary, I cannot spy upon her—she is my friend. Why," he cried warmly, "she's the finest girl you ever met!"

"Why, my dear Holton, cannot you see? She was spying upon you."

"I cannot see how she was doing that," protested Holton. "She made no attempt."

"Well, see here, Mr. Holton, you have established your acquaintance. Now, then, I ask you this: If you discover in the course of your friendship with her that she is working to injure our country, will you take steps to prevent her doing so and to apprise me as to the facts?"

"I am under oath to the United States, sir."

"Well, then, that is all I ask. You are ordered hereby to pursue your acquaintance with this young woman to that end."

"Yes, sir," replied Holton. "I suppose then that I shall remain in Washington some time."

"No, Mr. Holton, you'll not be in Washington long. Miss La Tossa left for Tampa this morning."

Holton started to his feet.

"And I'm to follow her?"

"Yes, at once, please. You had better arrange about transportation and the like immediately."

"Thank you, sir."

Holton did not hear the laughter that followed his outburst of gratitude, or at least he paid no attention to it. For the one thought that filled his mind was that he was going to some heavenly place where his dance partner of the night before was to be.

CHAPTER IV.

A Frank Admission.

Holton's requisitions were promptly attended to, and by the time he had that one service you can perform—talk to me; I'm dreadfully bored."

Holton seated himself obediently.

"Beastly raw and windy, wasn't it, today?"

"Yes."

Then she laughed at him unaffectedly.

"What are you laughing at?"

"At your brilliancy. Oh, you are masterly! And yet," she added, "they told me you were so clever."

"I cannot help what people say," he began, and then, impatient at his obvious disadvantage, he changed the subject. "I had the most curious thing happen to me on this train," he went on.

"Now," she laughed, "you promise to be really entertaining. What was it?"

"Do tell me!"

"I boarded the car," said Holton, "and fell asleep." She giggled, and he raised his hand impatiently. "I fell asleep, and while I slept some rascal cut a hole in my bag and rummaged through the contents."

He glanced at her sharply. But her face revealed nothing except polite concern.

"Nothing was stolen," continued the officer, "and I cannot imagine why the thing was done."

"I think, perhaps, I can tell you," she said calmly. "You were attached to the Scorpion. She had been testing out some new torpedo. You came to Washington on the eve of war, and now you hurry away again to Tampa. Certain persons were desirous to know whether your departure concerned the Scorpion, and your bag was searched for orders or other writings that might throw light upon the subject."

"You are frank," Holton looked at her admiringly. "But how do you happen to know all this?"

"Because I'm a spy."

Holton's face assumed the color of a perfectly ripened tomato.

"You—you—"

Her hearty laughter brought him to a pause.

"How astonished you seem to be!" She regarded him humorously. "Why," she added, "I really believe he thinks now I cut open his bag."

Holton brought himself up with a jerk.

"Miss La Tossa," he said, "I bow to you. You can deprive a man of speech about as handily as any person I ever knew. Of course, you're not a spy!"

"Do you really believe that?" Her eyes were serious now. "Do you?"

"Yes," he returned desperately.

"Then, Mr. Holton, I beg to inform you that I am a spy."

Holton received the girl's announcement with bowed head, and as he didn't speak she looked at him with defiant eyes.

"I am a Cuban. I am not a professional spy, as you may imagine. I fear I am not a spy at all in the high sense of the term. But I have tried to serve my country; I shall continue to do so. My country is in peril. I could be, I was born to be, I fear, a pleasure-loving butterfly. But I have found that there are ways in which my country has need even of poor me."

"Yes, but we need not be enemies."

Holton's voice was very earnest.

She did not reply, and Holton added: "I applaud your motives, but surely you do not imagine Cuba to be in danger at the hands of the United States. I should think Spain would be your object, and if the United States, I ask you why?"

Still, she did not answer, and Holton, shrugging his shoulders, impatiently repeated his question.

"Why?"

"Do you know, Mr. Holton," she said after a moment's pause, "that every mile southward this train flies in—"

"Well, we'll have to let him go; we've done our part."

The two men spent some time in the station, framing a telegram in cipher, which, when completed, was sent to Tampa. Then they disappeared.

Holton in the meantime slept, and was still asleep when the train moved out. Awakened by a sudden turn of the cars, he started bolt upright and looked about him with only a vague idea as to where he was. When he came to a realizing sense of his situation he looked at his watch, and then tried to resume his nap. But this time he did not fall asleep, and so, after dozing about for half an hour, he decided to go into the smoker.

He had some very excellent cigars in his grip, and, pulling out the bag, he leaned down to unlock it, when he saw the long hole which had been cut in the shining pigskin.

He regarded the damage for a second with rising anger, and then unlocked the valise and searched it thoroughly to see what had been stolen. For his only idea was that some sneak thieves had taken advantage of his slumber.

But, finding everything intact, he was obliged to cast about for another explanation. It was then that the thought of spies occurred to him. Thus thinking, he rose from his seat and looked searchingly over the occupants of his car.

Almost the first person his eyes lighted upon was a girl in the section diagonally opposite him. One glance at her profile was sufficient to send Holton stumbling and gasping back into his seat.

The girl was Miss La Tossa.

He thought for a moment. Oh, to be sure, he had risen to find out who had maltreated his bag. Then—

Good Heavens! Holton's hands flew to his head after the most approved manner of tragedy, and for a moment he tried to dismiss the surging thoughts from his mind. But no, the facts were large and luminous and not to be denied, and these facts were as follows: He had gone asleep in the car, his bag had been cut open and rifled. Now, then, Miss La Tossa had been designated by men who should know whereof they spoke as a spy. Miss La Tossa was the only other person in the car—he paused. He just would not think it, that was all.

So, picking up a magazine, he settled back in his seat and tried to lose himself in a serial story. For a while he kept his mind fairly well upon the tale, but eventually he found his thoughts straying to the girl in front of him. Eventually he flung the magazine aside and shifted about uneasily.

After all, was he playing the game as he should? Silent contempt was all right if it were only noticed. But silent contempt when the person against whom it is directed does not feel it, is hardly a satisfactory course to pursue.

"I am an enemy to any enemy of my country, and by enemy I mean any person or group of persons whose good-will toward us may be questioned."

"Look here, Miss La Tossa, I like you. If the honest admiration of a man is anything to you, you can make the most of that statement. And so I ask you with the friendliest motives—why should you think it necessary to pry into the affairs of the United States?"

"I am an enemy to any enemy of my country, and by enemy I mean any person or group of persons whose good-will toward us may be questioned."

"Then you infer that the United States is not acting in a way to show good-will to Cuba?" Holton was thorough.

"Indeed!" she remarked.

completed his packing at the club his tickets for the Florida Special had arrived.

He lunched with Billy Holt of the ordinance department, and then took a hack to the station, where he found the train made up. He had several magazines in his hands, and settled down to read with his feet luxuriously resting on the other seat of his section.

It was not many minutes, however, before he yawned broadly, and five minutes thereafter his magazine had tumbled from his hand and he was fast asleep.

As he fell into slumber two men approached the porter, and, throwing open their coats, displayed Secret Service shields.

While their English was perfect, they were surely of the Latin race.

"Ya-as, sub—all right, gentlemen." The porter was very much impressed.

"Ya-as, sub, go right along."

"As they approached Holton's section one of them stopped.

"Well, here he is," he remarked.

"Yes, and asleep, too. He's bound for Tampa for a surety."

"Yes; but, now that he kindly sleeps, we might as well go farther." He bent down and carefully drew Holton's bag out into the aisle. "Quick," he said, looking up, "the keys."

His companion drew from his pocket a large bunch of keys, and the man tried several without success. Finally, becoming impatient, he drew the bag to the seat behind Holton, and, drawing his knife, cut a long hole near the top. Then, inserting his hand and arm, he fished about for several minutes, but without feeling anything other than wearing apparel and toilet articles.

Finally he straightened up and pushed the bag into the place whence it had been withdrawn with the frowning remark:

"Well, we'll have to let him go; we've done our part."

With this thought, Holton arose from his seat and, with a self-conscious smile, bustled up to Miss La Tossa as though he had just discovered her presence.

"Why, of all things!" he exclaimed. "How do you do, Miss La Tossa!"

Her book fell to the floor and she looked up. "Mr. Holton?" she cried.

"The very same," laughed Holton, "and may I ask what strange circumstances have brought us together again?"

"I was just going to ask you that."

Holton looked at her curiously, hardly knowing what reply to make, after such a check.

"Where are you going?" he inquired at length.

"To Tampa and thence to my home," she responded.

"Oh!" Holton shifted doubtfully. "I'm going to Tampa, too."

"Really?"

"I trust if I can be of any service you will avail yourself of my presence, Miss La Tossa," he added somewhat formally.

"Thank you. Won't you sit down, I'm so sorry."

"Well, I'll be hanged if that isn't gratitude!"

"If you don't mind, Mr. Holton," she said sweetly, "I should like to read now."

Holton hustled out of the seat in a great hurry.

"Oh, certainly, by all means; most assuredly," he burst out, and returned to his seat.

As he sat there thinking, the train stopped at a small station to change engines. When it started again the conductor came into the smoker calling Holton's name. He responded, and the conductor gave him a long, official appearing dispatch. The message ran as follows:

"Holton:

"Congress declared war today. Sampson will be ordered to blockade the Cuban coast. Troops will mobilize at Port Tampa. They will proceed thence in transports to Cuba. You will remain in Tampa, availing yourself of the Gnat [a small torpedo boat, built for a battleship to carry] to prevent any attempt to destroy transports. You will watch Cuban camp at Tampa for developments regarding matters already brought to your attention and will hold yourself in readiness to land secretly on Cuban soil to perform intelligence work with regard to location and movements of Spanish warships. You will work under direct orders of the Secretary [LONG].

Dinner Stories

Smith and Jones took luncheon together one day. Both ordered bluefish, and when the fish came one was large fish for himself and gave his friend the little one.

"You're no gentleman," said Jones. "Now, if I had been serving I should have given you the big one and would have kept the little one myself."

"Well," replied Smith, "you'd got the little one either way, so what are you kicking about?"

Sir Herbert Tree's production of "Joseph and His Brethren" reminds a newspaper correspondent of this story. The Sunday school class had been reading the Bible narrative, and the minister had come to examine the pupils. The replies to all his questions had been quick, intelligent and correct. Such as:

"What great crime did these sons of Jacob commit?"

"They sold their brother Joseph."

"Quite correct. And for how much?"

"Twenty pieces of silver."

"And what added to the cruelty and wickedness of these had brothers?"

"No answer."

"What made their treachery even more detestable and heinous?"

"Then a bright little fellow stretched out an eager hand."

"Well, my little man?"

"Please, sir, they sold him too cheap."

Search Me!

By REV. PARLEY E. ZARTMANN, D.D.

Secretary of Extension Department
Mealy Bible Institute, Chicago

TEXT—Search me, O God, and know my heart; try me, and know my thoughts; and see if there be any wicked way in me, and lead me in the way everlasting. Psalm 139:23-24.

There is a way of life that transcends all others. More delightful as we go on in it, and more blessed at the end—it is the way everlasting. Here the Psalmist prays that he may be led in such a way, and that such heart-searching will take place that he may not miss that way.

The Christian will pray this prayer, should pray it daily, for, conscious of his fellowship with God, he would have it proven and would have taken from him everything hindering such fellowship. But the sinner will pray this prayer, he must pray it. In his case, consciousness of God as revealed here leads to terror because of sin and desire for forgiveness, acceptance and cleansing. The Christian sees how far short he is of the glory of God and his cry is that nothing may interfere with complete conformity, and for this he needs faith, justifying and sanctifying. In addition, the sinner needs saving faith before he finds his feet in the first steps of the way everlasting. Note the steps by which the sinner comes to this cry—Search me.

Divine Omniscience.

God knows me, and knows all about me (vs. 1-6). Every movement, every thought, every word, every way—all known to the God with whom I have to do. He knows me thoroughly, and as if he had examined me minutely. "He knows all men, he knows all men thoroughly, he knows all men constantly." This solemn truth may awaken wonder and admiration in the Christian, it may be a great comfort to him and an assurance of guidance and well-being; but to the sinner it is a solemn warning and a call to repentance and faith. The truth of this part of the Psalm has a beautiful parallel in the epistle to the Romans: "For of him, and through him, and to him are all things." God knows my down-sitting and my uprising, he compasses my path, he has beset me behind and before, he is acquainted with all my ways. What can a sinner do in the presence of such a God but to say: Search me, . . . try me . . . lead me? And God will answer his cry.

There emerges another reason for the sinner's cry: he cannot get away from this God (vs. 7-12). God is everywhere, not a mere power ruling in might and by laws really outside himself, but a personality distinct, separate, superior, and seeing all I do. "Thou God, search me." This everywhere-ness of God makes it a dreadful, an awful, thing to sin. "Whether shall I go from thy spirit? or whether shall I flee from thy presence? Up into heaven . . . in hell . . . the uttermost parts of the sea . . . darkness shall cover me . . . the darkness and the light are both alike to thee." What can I hide from him, or where can I sin that he will not see me? Yes, but this very God who knows all about us and who sees all we do, who dwells in the uttermost parts of the earth also can save to the uttermost. Thank God, he still forgives. Search me . . . try me . . . lead me.

I know not where His islands lift
Their fringed palms in air;
I only know I cannot drift
Beyond His love and care.

Once more the Psalmist sets forth a reason for his cry for searching—God is associated so intimately with his entire life, even before he himself had any consciousness. "Thine eyes did see my substance, yet being imperfect; and in thy book all my members were written, which in continuance were fashioned, when as yet there was none of them." "I am fearfully and wonderfully made." Man is a creature according to God's design, living under God's inspection and by God's power.

Search me . . . try me . . . lead me. This prayer is natural now. If you have never made it there is only one reason—you never have seen God in his holiness, power and might. When God searches he may find in you some way of wickedness—unforgotten sin, some unyielded room, some unloving spirit, some selfishness—but if you really will to have it so, God will lead you in the way everlasting, a way that shineth more and more unto the perfect day. So, couple with this prayer, that other petition, "Create in me a clean heart, O God, and renew a right spirit within me." Let your vital concern be, Is my heart right with God? for with him that is the supreme thing. Put your prayer into the words of that heart-song:

Oh, for a heart to praise my God,
A heart from sin set free;
A heart that's sprinkled with Thy blood,
So freely shed for me.

JANESVILLE VETERAN DESCRIBES REUNION

Relates Stories of Famous Battle at Gettysburg and Experiences at Feast Jubilee.

By A. W. Stillwell.
The Peace Jubilee of the Blue and Gray at the fiftieth anniversary of the battle of Gettysburg developed an encouraging feature in the loyalty and stability of our reunited southern citizens who were so seriously broken and shattered over the final result of that great conflict of fifty years ago, the greatest battle of the greatest war the world has ever known. Veterans of the north and the south who participated in this decisive turning point in the fortunes of war and downfall of the rebellion, met, after half a century upon this blood soaked battlefield, overflowing with genuine friendship, charity and loyalty.

Fifty-six thousand veterans of the Blue and the Gray, survivors of the two hundred thousand engaged in this battle, were encamped in seven thousand government tents upon the old battlefield, now a national park and cemetery, with hundreds of statues, monuments and memorials located at various points over the field.

In this cordial and loyal greeting of the Blue and the Gray the old sting of defeat was completely effaced and the veterans from the south unanimously assured that there was not a particle of animosity now existing on the part of the old veterans in gray, but on the other hand they were heartily glad that the civil war ended as it did, in a reunited country with the best government on earth. Furthermore, if Japan should ever conclude to come over and smite us on one cheek, the old boys in gray and their sons and grandsons would help us to turn the other cheek also. The animosity still existing in the south is largely attributable to the young men who were born after the war was over, and is the outgrowth of political aspirations.

The Janesville delegation to the great Gettysburg reunion, which included Lee, Hall, Moore, Smith, Winslow, Stevens and the writer, will all be heartily welcome for the splendid and liberal treatment provided by the state of Wisconsin and the courteous care and entertainment extended by the governor and attorney general during the trip and while on the camp ground.

The old original stone walls marking the lines of both Mead and Lee on July 3rd, 1863, are still standing intact as they were on that eventful day. Lee's from the seminary west of town following on the line of Seminary Ridge southward two miles to Roundtop, and Mead's from the fish hook point at Culp's Hill east of town along Cemetery Ridge southward two miles to Little Roundtop, and between these two Roundtops is the Devil's Den, neutral ground occupied by sharpshooters. The distance between these two main lines is approximately one mile.

Many of the original batteries of artillery in action on the third day are now standing where last in service in this battle, upon both Mead's and Lee's lines, each engraved in bronze with a brief historical sketch of the guns, various movements and service during the three days' conflict. One particular cannon located at "High Water Mark," a point a few yards south of the Bloody Angle, has engraved in bronze "This cannon fired the shot which killed General Lee," which means that the enemy was getting up uncomfortably close, and firing 240 bullets at each discharge of this particular gun.

The course of Pickett's famous charge on the afternoon of the third day is well defined, the writer was told by a rebel captain of artillery who commanded the battery directly in the rear of the position occupied by General Pickett just previous to the charge, that he overheard a conversation between Generals Lee, Longstreet and Pickett, who were standing by a clump of trees near his battery, Lee advising the contemplated charge to break Mead's center between Sickles' and Hancock's corps, and Longstreet expostulating, saying, "General, your orders shall be obeyed, but I don't believe that any 15,000 men in the world can charge across the field three-fourths of a mile successfully and take that position, they are laying for you with a reserve corps close in rear of their front line."

On the first day the rebels with much the largest force were the most successful, the second day resulted in no very important advantage to either side, but on the third day the rebel army was thoroughly whipped and beaten, yet Lee did not seem inclined to give it up without one more supreme effort, so after an hour's preliminary heavy artillery fire from over a hundred guns on each side, which seemed to make the rocks and hills tremble, Pickett said to Longstreet, "Shall I go?" and the latter reluctantly nodded assent; then Pickett's division, together with four brigades from Mead and Pender, a total of 15,000 men, came out into the open and started at once in that reckless charge for the covered position which proved to be a forlorn hope. The sudden appearance of Pickett's force in the open field was the signal to let loose all the iron dogs of war, and the charging human was very soon completely enveloped in a tremendous storm of shot and shell, musketry, grape and canister.

They were brave and persistent fighters but could not perform an impossibility; the 15,000 within fifteen minutes were almost totally annihilated, killed, wounded and captured, hardly a corporal's guard ever reaching the Bloody Angle.

Great Preacher Productive.

A wonderful sermon maker was C. H. Spurgeon. He had no need to repeat himself, for his powers seemed inexhaustible, and, moreover, he made repetition impossible by publishing his sermons week by week. The weekly issue began in 1861, and, though the great preacher died in 1891, he left behind so much material that the publication has continued till this day, and is likely to go on for at least another dozen years. No other published sermons ever attained such popularity as Spurgeon's. One sermon alone sold over 300,000 copies.

CLINTON

Clinton, Oct. 22.—Born to Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Peitz, a fine boy, Tuesday morning.

Mrs. George Turpin of Chicago is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Anderson and her brother, Frank and wife.

Several of our music lovers went to Beloit last night to hear Evan Williams, the tenor, and report a very fine treat.

Cal. S. Thomas of Los Angeles, Cal., formerly a merchant of Clinton was here last Saturday between trains, having run out from Chicago to see his mother at Lauderdale lake. Mr. Thomas left here nine years ago. He was on his way to New York to buy goods for the mercantile establishment by whom he is employed. He reports Mrs. Thomas as enjoying good health. They are much in love with California.

The members of the Clinton German Lutheran church yesterday shipped by prepaid freight three thousand six hundred and seventy pounds of vegetables to Concordia College, Milwaukee. Those who did not have vegetables to donate gave money, so that beside paying the freight, they had $8.34 in money to send to them, also having raised a total of $11.00 in money which was certainly a splendid showing from a church in a town this size.

H. A. Moehlenpach, Solon Cooper, George H. Graves, Oscar Duxstad and Iver Jacobson went to Lake Mills, Wis., yesterday to attend a district bankers' association meeting. The trip was made overland in Mr. Duxstad's car.

C. M. Gates has sold his milk route to a Mr. Richards, a brother-in-law of Manager A. F. Krueger of the local Bowman Dairy Company. It is reported Mr. Richards will sell only pasteurized milk which he will secure of the Bowman company. Mr. Gates has served the public for several years and has given most excellent satisfaction, not only as to quality of the milk, but courteous and prompt service at all times. Mr. Richards will take possession on November 15.

Mrs. A. I. Schmidt of Beloit is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. D. Winkley west of town.

MILTON JUNCTION

Milton Junction, Oct. 23.—Marion Rose and family are moving into town and have rented the house vacated by P. F. Garthwaite.

A CLEAR COMPLEXION

RUDDY CHEEKS — SPARKLING EYES—MOST WOMEN CAN HAVE.

Says Dr. Edwards, a Well-Known Ohio Physician.

Dr. F. M. Edwards for 17 years treated scores of women for liver and bowel ailments. During these years he gave to his patients a prescription made of a few well-known vegetable ingredients mixed with olive oil, naming them Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, you will know them by their olive color.

These tablets are wonder-workers on the liver and bowels, which cause a normal action, carrying off the waste and poisonous matter that one's system collects. If you have a pale face, hollow look, dull eyes, pimples, coated tongue, headaches, a listless, no-good feeling, all out of sorts, inactive bowels, you take one of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets nightly for a time and note the pleasing results.

Thousands of women, as well as men, take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets now and then just to keep in the pink of condition.

Fads and Fashions

New York, Oct. 22.—A review of the autumn and early winter fashions as shown in the displays by the leading houses of importers here and elsewhere, reveals a great deal that is beautiful and attractive. One of the most striking and pleasing features is the beauty of colors and textures in the materials used. As to the styles, it may be said that there is a great variety of them and that while some of them are beautiful and refined others are decidedly barbaric, intended, it seems, rather to startle by their daring unconventionality and eccentricity than to please by their beauty and harmony.

Speaking in a general way it may be said that the styles of the present day are dominated by Greek or Oriental influences. Skirts are still scant and the silhouettes in the best models approach the normal form as represented by some of the famous Greek masterpieces of sculpture. Of course, there are exceptions from that general rule and some of the models by famous designers display silhouettes altogether absurd if not actually repulsive and indecent.

The luxury displayed in the costumes of the present day, especially in those for evening wear and in dancing and dinner frocks and wraps has never been equalled. Most ball gowns have a detached train which may be thrown over the arm, and dancing dresses with round skirts and long, somewhat more elegant appearance by the richness of their trimming of jet or jewels. Jewels in gorgeous brilliancy and colors are combined with rich materials of the most beautiful and richest colors and textures.

Much lace, threaded with metal, made entirely of metal, powdered with rhinestones and jewels of various sorts, is employed to fashion the scantiest of draperies. The graceful mantle of lace falling from the shoulders and covering the back is often fashioned of exquisite Chantilly and Point de Milan. A touch purely French is the edging of much of this lace with fur, mostly mink, sable, putois and seal skin.

Ribbons too, have a large share of attention. These furnish the new wide girdles, often falling in long ends at the side. A favorite ribbon trimming is the long, rose quilting of ribbon two or three inches wide, which, in contrasting color, edges the skirt or Russian blouse.

Mantles to accompany such gowns surpass them in the point of splendor. An innovation is the mantle of fur or of velvet, falling from the shoulders to the back in the lines of an Italian officer's cape; the front, in such cases, is like a short jacket reaching just below the waist, the idea being that the cape shall be pulled around with the hands to cover the front of the skirt.

The magnificence of materials seems to have inspired unprecedented beauties in this line. A brocade in bold design of Burgundy red or white forms, for instance, the upper part of a pointed mantle, while the lower portion is a band of the solid red. This is perfectly simple, falling like a skirt, finished by one of the huge collars of sable. New fur collars, by the way, have a curious tendency to find their place as far from the neck as possible in the back.

Many short wraps of velvet, brocade or plain, finished with fur, and also made entirely of fur, and jackets accompany the afternoon gowns of satin or velvet. The favorite furs for jackets are caracul, broadtail, dyed squirrel, called "zibeline," mink and seal skin. These have collars of putois, civet, fox, in every conceivable shade and type. Many jackets of cloth are also trimmed with a collar and cuffs of these latter furs, also of leopard, pony, and jackal.

Tailored jackets have lost their stiffness entirely. They are made of the soft rathens and plush like materials, also of the new cotton velvets, striped like corduroy, and, in spite of all this, of the ever favorite dark blue serge. Any number of jackets are in contrast with the material of the skirt, such as jackets of Scotch plaid, with skirts in plain dark blue or green serge or broadcloth. One house makes a specialty of a two-ounce pleated skirt of black and white shepherd's plaid, worn with a jacket of black rathene.

As to the jacket length, it varies from the waistline to the latest depth, which is about to the ankles. In this latter case the portion of the skirt showing below the jacket is often entirely of fur. It would seem reasonable that either this very long, rather ample jacket, a sort of Russian blouse or one which crutches the short loose hip-line, will become popular; the former with tall women, the latter with short women, provided they are not too early. One-piece dresses for afternoon wear are the excuse for a new line, very long waisted in the back, which buttons to reach them in a straight line without a curve from the neck down.

Nearly all blouses shown in the shops have low collars. There are many kinds of new collars in the market and all are large and broad except the adapted Japanese collar, which is about two inches wide, rolls back on the gown, runs to the waist in a negligent line and stands away from the back of the neck for two inches.

While the backs of bodices are high, it is not fashionable now to run the line up to the hair. On coats, as well as on blouses, the collar springs away from the neck as soon as it passes the shoulder, no matter how high it may be. One does not see high collars, however, on blouses. They are kept for coats. The rolling Japanese affair leads all the others, but the sailor collar is back in style and is put on the smartest kind of waists.

The only neck ornament worn in front is a loose cravat, usually of black taffeta, and many of the individualists tie this ribbon into a loose four-in-hand instead of a bow. No matter what kind of a collar is used, it is quite low in front, and none of the women seem to mind. Afternoon bodices that are a part of a gown have exceptionally low broad collars of lace, with a at fichu exact inside, crossed surplice-wise over the bust and held there by a barpin.

There is a new collar that has just made its appearance, called the "Henry II." It is small, stands up a little, then rolls over, is far away from the neck at the back, and vanishes to a point on the sides of a décolletage which should be square, except that it broadens out over the bust. It is not popular yet, but it is promised as the new décolletage in afternoon gowns for the winter.

If one does not wish to expose the neck, then a gimpie must be worn, for there is no way of building up the blouse into a high collar without making it a trifle old-fashioned. The collars on coats are often high and straight, and others have an immense flare at the back, then turn over or twice their depth. Most of these are made of velvet or fur.

Among the fashionable accessories that Paris is offering in the shops are flowers, or rather roses, made of a cloth that resembles puttee leather, and is called oil cloth. It is soft and shining and flexible enough to twist and turn into well-shaped blossoms.

The Engineer

By GEORGE FITCH, Author of "At Good Old Siwash"

THE engineer is the large, quiet man in overalls who acts as mahout of the modern locomotive.

In the last thirty years, locomotives have quadrupled in weight. But the same sized engineers are still used, and are giving very good satisfaction.

The engineer is one of the few men who can ride free on our railroad trains nowadays. His is a pleasant life. All he has to do is to sit on a cushioned seat and career blithely over all through the space and scenery and various obstructions.

He does not have to work at all. The fireman does the work. All the engineer does is to pull the throttle and yank the reverse lever and manipulate the brake and watch the steam gauge and supervise the forced draft and jolly along the head-end dynamo and lubricate the superheater and back up once in a while when the high pressure cylinder head breaks out.

The rest of the time he rides entirely at his ease and amuses himself by wondering if he can pick up the next switch signal soon enough to stop the train if it happens to be red.

The engineer, it will thus be seen, leads a jolly life and enjoys a great deal of travel during the year. He usually travels about 250 miles a day, and when he gets off his engine he looks like Othello in overalls. If he travels too fast the company lays him off for speeding. If he travels too slow the train dispatcher reports him, and one must stop traveling altogether in the middle of the journey, the coroner usually sits upon him and the officials try to prove that he wrecked his train and himself on purpose.

The engineer is always present at all train wrecks, and usually he is in a reserved seat in the front row. When the engineer observes another 20-ton engine approaching his on the same track at the rate of 80 miles an hour he is supposed by etiquette to remain at his post. This he usually does and when the wreckage is cleared away he is discovered holding the attacking engine in his

There are a great many different causes of wrecks in this country, but there is usually one standard result. The engineer is ruined for all future use as a citizen. It almost seems, sometimes, as if many railroad companies used no precaution against accident beyond supplying engineers to serve as buffers between the opposing trains.

Death of Mr. Hartwick. Gottlieb Carl Hartwick, aged 82 years, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Julia Brunkow in Juda, Saturday afternoon after an illness of only an hour. A stroke of paralysis was the cause of his death. He was born on March 23, 1831, in Germany, and in 1856 he came to this country, settling near Juda. Following the death of his wife, seventeen years ago, Mr. Hartwick made his home with his two daughters in Juda. They and another daughter in Kansas, and three sons, Henry, of Donaldson, Minn., Charles of South Wayne, and Herman of Renma, South Dakota, survive.

The funeral was held from the home of Mrs. Brunkow at one o'clock yesterday afternoon and was officiated from the Evangelical church. Interment in Mt. Vernon cemetery.

Lamps and Safety.
Be sure that no bit of charred wick or burned fly or moth is left in the lower part of the burner. There is danger of these igniting and setting fire to the oil in the reservoir. If a lamp has been left standing with a little oil in it, it should not be lighted until filled and the burner carefully wiped. It is possible that gas may have formed, making the lamp unsafe to light before refilling.

Considerate!
A Wesleyan Methodist missionary in India (says the "Manchester Guardian") wrote home to the girl he was in love with, asking her to come out and marry him. The girl's aunt had the same name. She got the letter and went out. The missionary met her on the quay, and such was his delicacy of mind that he married her. When she died, years afterwards, he married the niece.

SHODDY paint, like shoddy cloth, soon shows the wear; it looks nice to start with.

Maybe that's the kind of paint you used on your house a year or so ago.

You'll not make the same mistake again, if you can help it; and you needn't if next time you use Devco Lead-and-Zinc Paint. It's an "all wool" paint; made to stay on a long time and look well while it's on; it's paint protection to property and pocketbook.
